

Times have changed.

Is our school In The Picture?

Explicit sexual imagery is now easily accessed, created and shared by anyone with a smartphone, tablet or computer. For young people, it is almost impossible to avoid.

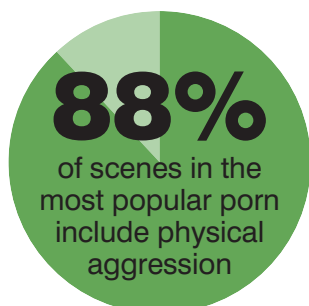

Pornography is now the most prominent sexuality educator for many young people. But porn conveys a whole range of problematic messages – about bodies, gender, sex, consent, power and aggression.

Young people need help to navigate healthy development in this new reality.

Addressing pornography's influence is a challenging task, but ignoring it is no longer an option. Porn isn't going to go away.

- Is our school equipping students for healthy, respectful relationships in the twenty-first century?
- Does our relationships and sexuality curriculum address the influence of pornography?
- Do teachers and wellbeing staff have access to relevant professional learning and resources?
- Does school policy address explicit sexual imagery?
- Does the school work together with parents and community organisations to support students to navigate the challenges of new technologies, including the ease with which sexual imagery can be accessed, created and shared?

In The Picture is a new, comprehensive secondary school resource that supports schools to address the influence of explicit sexual imagery. It provides guidelines, suggested strategies and practical resources for each aspect of a whole school approach to the issues.
